Otherwise makes great coffee and the little rubber attachment in the coffee basket helps keep up the pressure if your wife buys coarse ground coffee by mistake. My reasons were that I didn't want one that used capsules for various reasons I like freshly ground coffee, fresh milk and don't trust manufacturers to keep producing the relevant capsules for more than a couple of years. Although there were some mixed reviews of this one, there seemed to be as many positive reviews if not more of this one as there were of all the others on the market under 200. I wasn't sure how much we would use one so spending 200 on one that was just as likely to break as one at circa 25 seemed a bit silly. I had seen one in the flesh at Tesco's and it actually looked pretty good not cheap and plastic as one person has commented brushed stainless steel and matt black body. I have experienced Morphy Richards customer service before and was very impressed by it and others' people's comments on here seemed to imply the same thing plus it comes with a 2 year guarantee. Although there are more stylish brands out there to choose from, Krups Gaggia etc seemed to really get slated when it came to sorting out problems. We have been using the machine for two weeks now, and we are extremely impressed with it. Great espresso and a good frother for making cappuccinos, very quick and efficient even with my rubbish plastic jug. From switching on the machine at the mains to making an espresso shot or two and frothing some milk it takes less than a minute. I can't guarantee that everybody's experience will be the same as ours but it's good to know that if there are any problems further down the line there is good customer service to fall back on. Hope this helps! In comparison to a professional machine it is capable of making a reasonable espresso with a crema, in comparison to most if not all home machines in its range it makes a great espresso.

For best results you need to learn about making espresso, rather than just taking it out of the box and plugging it in. For the novice buyer, learning about extraction times and how to tamp properly will make a noticeable difference. A few niggles: 1. The instructions for its use are pretty poor as far as making a good espresso is concerned. They don't tell you that it's meant to make a double espresso or two singles rather than one single, nor does it tell you to use 2 scoops instead of 1 or even give you any indication of how much to fill it. 2. The scoop is exactly a 8g scoop not a 7g, when using two of these the espresso is a little bitter. It's worth experimenting with slightly less coffee. 3. The tamper could do with being a bit bigger. 4. There is a delay of a few seconds between pressing the button to stop extracting and when the coffee stops pouring out. If you are looking for a specific extraction time, you need to take this into consideration. 5. It tends to drip afterwards, it has a drip tray but if its not emptied regularly it can get messy. If you want a plug and play machine, dont get this, try one of the nespresso machines. If you know what you are doing or are prepared to learn more about coffee making then this is a great machine for the price. It is a nice, neat size and produces good cups of coffee with minimum amount of time and mess. You can get two espressos a go, each with the perfect amount of crema. The milk frother also works well, and surprisingly quickly, enabling lattes or cappuccinos to be produced very easily. The only very small niggles are that the machine carries on dripping coffee for a while after you have made it. This would not be a problem if you remembered to empty the drip tray after every cup, but my husband does not. Thus, the drip tray can sometimes overflow into the area below it, which you then have to absorb with paper towels. Also, the water compartment is slightly tricky to get in and out without spilling any.

But these are very minor problems and should not put you off buying one, especially for this price. I find it makes OK tasting espresso, but with virtually no crema, which connoisseurs would say is a vital part of the espresso experience. It is fast and easy to use and is reasonably easy to clean. Milk frothing for cappuccinos is OK, but not great the froth is not particularly thick or creamy. In response to a couple of the adverse comments in other reviews the steam light is supposed to stay on all the time, it is not a fault if it doesnt go out although if it doesnt produce any steam, that obviously is a fault, and this is an espresso machine, which makes espressos, so you are supposed to use small cups. If you want mugs of coffee, buy a different design of coffee maker, such as a filter machine. If anyone knows how to improve the amount of crema, I would be grateful.
